The purpose of this workshop is to discuss the range of alternatives for a process to test the utility incentive mechanism for the deployment of distributed energy resources (DERs) previously proposed by the assigned Commissioner in a Ruling of April 4, 2016. An agenda is forthcoming and will be posted to the service list.

Background: Subsequent to the Ruling on April 4, 2016, a workshop was held on June 13, 2016, focusing on the utility finance theory. On June 23, 2016 a Ruling was issued inviting party comments on the materials presented during the workshop and they were received on July 8, 2016. The feedback received both during the workshop and through comments remains under consideration in this proceeding. Beyond the utility finance theory identified above, the April 4, 2016, Ruling also suggested a regulatory process for identifying opportunities for cost-effective DER deployment, selecting, deploying, and verifying them, and awarding incentives. The Ruling identified the proposed regulatory process as a pilot, which is necessary to test the proposed incentive mechanism but, which would eventually be replaced by processes under development in the Distribution Resource Planning proceeding [DRP | R. 14-08-013]. Party comments on the proposed process suggested a range of alternatives that may better meet the Commission’s objective of promoting the cost-effective deployment of DERs in California. However, further consideration of the proposal and alternatives through a workshop is warranted. For questions about this workshop, please contact Natalie Guishar at natalie.guishar@cpuc.ca.gov.
